Almost Everywhere From the Present and From the Past
Designers Have Sought Ideas for

New Printed Voiles

—They have wandered through the fields and taken the tiny field flowers and arranged them in patterns like the old-fashioned chintz and challis designs. They have looked at the stars and caught ideas from their arrangements. The dainty leaves of tree and vine have also served as inspiration, and the scroll patterns that might have been originated by the Greeks of olden days have been the basis for another element of design.
—Which to designate as prettiest is difficult indeed, because each in its own style is very captivating, and the color arrangements and combinations show that an artist must have conceived them.

—We have a bewildering array of styles at each of the following prices—
